עור skin > Lat. corium – scortum [skin, hide] - ancient Grk. khros [skin, body surface] also Pol. and Russ. kora [bark] & – skora [skin – leather – bark / עגה > cake, Ger. Kuchen, kugel / ערש > cradle, crib, cresche / עם Latin cum - Span. con = with / עפר > capra (wild) goat / ערמה > PBH כרם kerem and Yid. krumm [pile] / ערביל > Lat. cribum [sieve] ??? / עגל > Ger. kugel [ball] / ערף [nape of neck] > scruff – scrofula – crewels [see pg...] & crepe , kreplach / ערף drip, condense > Pol. kropki [drizzle] / ערב > corvinus – corvus – crow / ערביל mix > scramble & cribble / עז – > Pol. koza [goat]. Applying Prof. I.E. Mozeson's ' ע ayin > C/K' transformation principle hypothesis – [which we corroborate and explain in greater detail in a later work concerning the withering transformations of the ayin] – it is probable that ערפ [drip] was transformed into the Polish 'krop(ic)' [drizzle] in the tower event. Cf. Heb. ערב orev = raven which became at Babel the proto Latin corvus [raven] - and also the ancestor of the Eng. 'crow'. Also – the Hebrew עור oer [skin, hide] spawned at the Tower of Babel the ancestor of the Lat. corium [skin, hide whence Lat. scortum = skin, hide - Galic. coria (leather) and Eng. excoriate = flay, strip, peel] and cortex [tree bark]. – and רעש ra'ash [noise, disturbance] yielded the Eng. 'ruckus & racket'. Also from עור OCS scora skin – Lat. scortius [of skin or leather] – Polish skora [skin] – and Ital. scorza = fruit peel, tree bark . Grk. chros χρως [skin] – chroia / chroa – [skin, complexion]. Grk. chroma [skin, complexion] – Today's usage of the word chrome in the sense of 'a color' derives from its Grk. usage in the sense of 'complexion'
