Perhaps also [with a sinn instead] שרף srof [scorpion] to scorpion - שרט seret [incision] to screed<sup>89</sup>

It seems to me likely that the Hebrew ברוש ברוש brosh / brot is the etymon of the words - bush – brush – brush [vegetation] – LLat. Brucus [heath, heather] labrusca [wild vine] – brusque –

Perhaps also muscle from משל mosheil [to control]<sup>10</sup>

שען [lean] To skew - שריון shirion [protective armor] to screen

Also Hebrew ש shinn to Lat. hard C - שפע > copia plenty, abundance - שלום > calma or שלוה to calma - שאר to caro meat – שפך > capulator [one who pours] - שלום > Columba [dove] - שלוח water pipe, canal to cloaca [sewer, drain, canal] - שרק [a comb] to carroco [sturgeon – which has strakelike stripes the length of its body in the idea of the teeth of a comb] - חמש five to quinque - פשע pesha [sin] – to pecco, peccare [sin] - שרוך s'roekh [string] to corrigia [shoelace, thong]

The skewer is a straight wooden or metal pin used for fastening meat or vegetables for roasting -that may likely have come about by means of a [Heb. to Gmnc. to Eng.] שורה shura > schura > skewer fortition development.<sup>11</sup>

שמד Destroy to scimitar?

Maybe also - שליח sholiakh [agent] to sclave, slave ??

<sup>8</sup> A Talmudic version סרט also denotes – a strip of cloth

<sup>11</sup> It is, however, possible that 'skewer' also developed collaterally from the Hebrew קו kav – a straight line – by means of an 'S mobile prothesis' - via a kav > kewer > skewer process.
